Clients Driving Construction Innovation 'Benefiting from Innovation'

ISBN 978-1-74107-756-6

Editors Kerry Brown, Keith Hampson, Peter Brandon and Janet Pillay

This book has been sponsored by the CRC (Cooperative Research Centre) for Construction Innovation in Australia. Managing Director of John Holland Group David Stewart did officially launch the book Clients Driving Construction Innovation: Benefiting from Innovation at the Australian International Project Management Conference in Canberra on Monday 13 October 2008.

"Clients Driving Construction Innovation: Benefiting from Innovation" brings together research on clients, designers, constructors and facility managers to canvass cutting-edge research in constructed facilities. It showcases technologies and practices developed by leading practitioner and researchers globally, and presents advanced applications of applied research for improving industry practice.

Benefiting from Innovation includes contributions from academics and practitioners from around the globe with specialist expertise in areas of:

- meeting clients' needs
- procurement and risk management
- improving efficiencies through information and communication technologies
- construction health and safety
- facilities management
- industry development
- sustainable construction for the future

Benefiting from Innovation is the third book in the Clients Driving Construction Innovation trilogy. The trilogy canvasses the role of clients in facilitating innovation in the construction industry. It draws upon cutting-edge research on clients, designers, constructors and facility managers to showcase how applied.

This series of books commenced in 2005 with the launch of Mapping the Terrain by the then Managing Director of John Holland Group, Bill Wild. The trilogy continued with the release of Moving Ideas into Practice in 2006 by the current Managing Director of John Holland Group, David Stewart.
