These are the Proceedings of the TG72/ARCOM Doctoral Research Workshop: Public Private Partnerships, held on 12 October 2011 in Preston, UK.

This Doctoral Workshop provided an opportunity to explore on-going research across diverse issues of Public Private Partnerships (PPP). The research presentations facilitated discussion on aspects of research methodological approach, data collection and analysis, perceived research outcomes and contributions to the body of knowledge, focussed on PPP and the interface with related knowledge domains in procurement and performance.

Nine papers are presented in the workshop proceedings. Three of the papers deal with element issues of PPPs, such as safety, risk and value for money. Three other papers presented the need for PPP implementation in Nigeria for transport projects, housing projects and for construction craft careers.

The final three papers talk about mechanisms for dealing with core issues of PPPs such as public services reformed agendas, under-investment in PPPs and performance.
