

CIB and Electronic Communication

Since the beginning of this year you can in fact also find information about activities in W60 on the Internet. By way of a start we have opted for a low, but very effective level of presence on the net.

We use the functionality of USE-net newsgroups for exchanging information and views on relevant issues. This means that for the moment there are no fancy WWW pages (maybe these will follow).

You can reach W60 by your favourite browser, and by typing the location:

<news://www.minvrom.nl/vrom/rgd.cib>

If you do, the browser opens the newsreader window, and you can see the messages on the server. It is very simple to exchange documents with other visitors by publishing a posting in the newsgroup and attaching the document you want to exchange.

The documents published in this issue of CIB Information regarding W60 are also published in the newsgroup. It is possible to exchange all kinds of documents, but please do so only in fileformats that are broadly used. (Word 7, Excel 7, etc.).

In developing the 'State of the Art Report we want this facility to be used as a platform for exchanging views and having discussions with other members of W60.

Moreover, views from other CIB members are very welcome, so we decided to have no password protection.

We want to start with an open platform, and depending on the development of the facility, a possible password protection may be added.
